Basis of Application for Sporting Nationality Explanations

Birth country

The act of being born in a particular country does not immediately give you the right to citizenship or the right to represent that country in a national sporting team. There are other criteria that you may need to meet.

You should check the official information of your country of birth to see what criteria you must meet to be eligible for citizenship. If you have the right of citizenship and can show proof of your current citizenship you do NOT need to apply for Sporting Nationality approval to represent this country. Proof of your citizenship status, such as a passport, is all you need.

You should check the official information of your National Floorball Federation to see what criteria they set for being allowed to participate in national representative teams. Some sporting bodies have regulations set by government authorities that will override the permission of the IFF. However, if the National Federation regulations allow it, then you may represent the country of your birth, even if you do not have formal citizenship of that country.

PROOF REQUIRED: Copy of your birth certificate or other certified official document (from the country of birth) that confirms your place of birth.

Birthplace of a Parent / Grandparent

If your biological mother or biological father was born on the territory/country of the relevant association you may be eligible to represent that country.

PROOF REQUIRED: Birth certificate showing biological mother/grandmother's or biological father/grandfather's first name (s) and surname (s), date of birth, and place of birth PLUS proof of relationship to the player. In the case of the birthplace of a parent being the basis for eligibility, the birth certificate of the applicant should also be included.

Where a player wishes to rely on the location of birth of their adoptive parent/s, a request for eligibility will be assessed on a case-by-case basis. Factors such as (but not limited by): the age when the player was adopted; the age when the player moved countries (if applicable); whether the player's biological parents are still alive; and whether the player has a 'genuine link' to the relevant Member Association.

Lived in the country for 5 years

If you have lived on the territory of the relevant association for at least five years you may be eligible to represent that country. The five-year period does not need to be the last five years, it can be earlier years but no more than five years may have passed since the last date that the player lived on the territory. In that case the time requirement resets.

Notwithstanding permitted absences, the "physical presence" of a player is required in the country or territory of the Member Association (MA) for at least 183 days during a 12-month period for the player to have "lived on the territory" of the MA for that year of the "defined period".

PROOF REQUIRED: Several different documents may be required to prove your eligibility in this criteria, but at a minimum the documents should include:

- a valid registration certificate issued when you arrived in the country
- evidence that you've been living in the country, such as utility bills and rental contracts
- evidence such as payslips, bank statements, tax returns that you've been working, studying, self-employed, self-sufficient or looking for work in the country
- evidence that you have not been absent from the country for more than 183 days in any single year of the 5-year period
